LATEST TRENDS

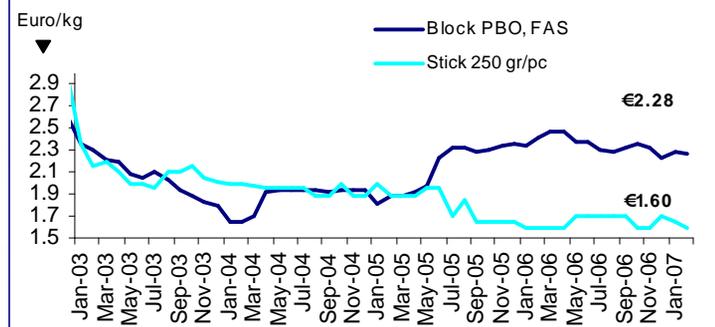

European import price trends as reported by correspondents appear somewhat less stable than in January. Upward movements are indicated for frozen tuna and some groundfish and cephalopod products while there are also signs of price firming for certain farmed fish products such as chilled seabream and salmon. Frozen pelagic prices, on the other hand, remain under downward pressure with price resistance reported in key markets for round product. Shrimp prices appear broadly stable although with some signs of weakening reported for vannamei products.

GROUND FISH

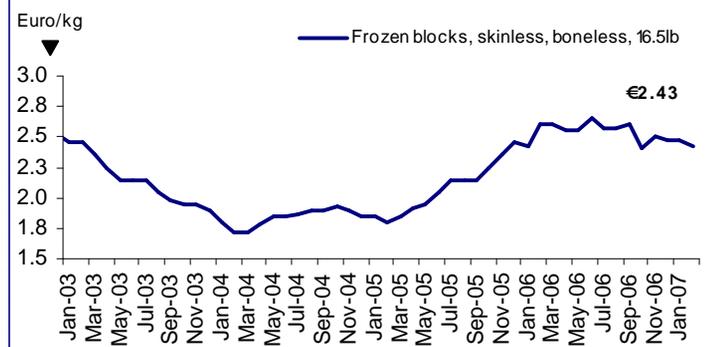

Import prices in frozen groundfish markets remain stable to firm with small increases reported from North European countries for Alaska pollock (Russian origin) and cod fillets. Over the past year, cod prices (in euros) have increased by around 10% while Alaska pollock prices have been largely stable in dollar terms but have declined by up to 10% in euro terms. Stable to increasing prices are also reported this month from Spain for frozen Cape hake fillet and h&g products.

Saithe - In Germany, origin: Norway

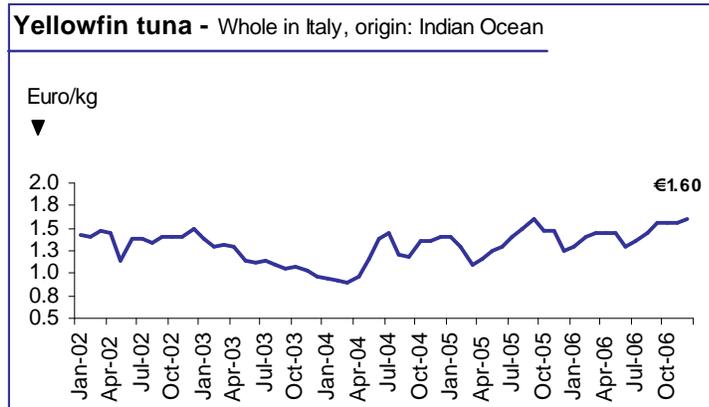

Saithe is an exception to the broadly stable to positive trend with an indication for skinless and boneless fillets down slightly on last month to €2.43/kg. The weaker saithe trend appears consistent with lower unit values for Norwegian frozen fillet exports in January, down 8% to Nok19.72/kg compared to the previous month.

FLATFISH

Despite seasonally weaker sales and stronger wild landings over the past month, cif farmed turbot prices in Spain are holding at January levels. The stability in prices has been helped by low stock levels in Spanish farms, a situation which is expected to continue through the coming weeks. Price levels, particularly for the larger size grades, remain well above those reported during the first quarter of 2006.

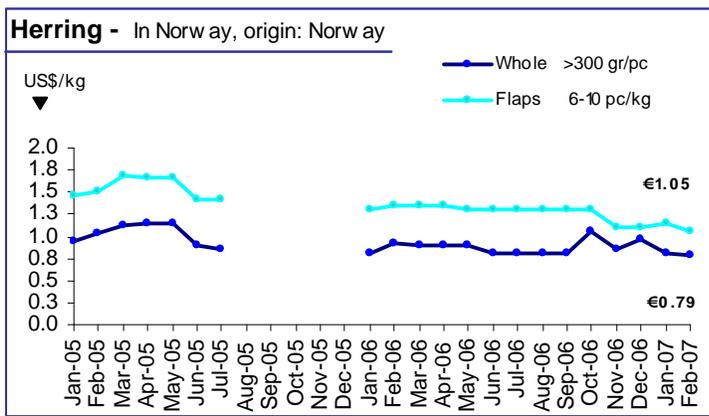

TUNA

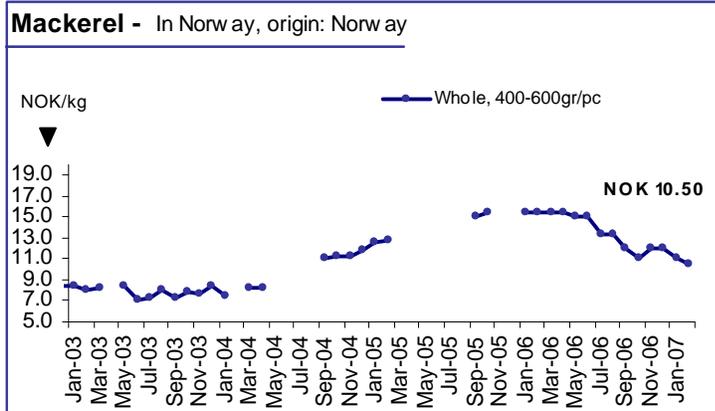

The trend of poor landings and high prices seems to be a distinctive feature of the tuna market in 2006/2007. Prices of whole yellowfin from the Indian Ocean reached EUR1 700/tonne in the Italian market while yellowfin loins reached nearly EUR4 100/tonnes. This is about 20 percent more than a year ago. Interestingly, price of whole skipjack in Spain reached EUR800/tonne, which is the same price as one year ago and approximately the same price paid by canneries processing skipjack in the Indian Ocean. This is explained by the increased use of frozen pre-cooked loins by Spanish canneries. The prices of skipjack loins were US$3 600 DDP (standard cleaning) in Spain and US$3 750 DDP (double cleaning) in Italy.

PELAGICS

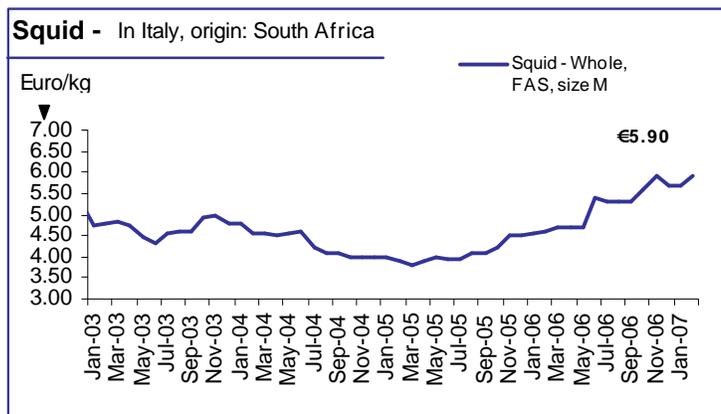

Frozen round mackerel price trends are still generally negative with demand in key markets such as Russia and Japan apparently unable to absorb current price levels even though these are below the historically high levels of 2005-2006. Demand for round herring is also disappointing in markets such as Russia. Herring indications, cif St Petersburg, are slightly down on levels for January particularly for the medium 250gr+ and 300gr+ grades. In the absence of any pickup in demand, the price outlook for the coming month is likely to remain difficult for both herring and mackerel exporters.

CEPHALOPODS

European import price trends for South African Loligo squid remain firm and indications this month are up 3 to 4% on January levels. The positive price trend has been largely influenced by a weak supply situation with poor fishing conditions due to high water temperatures again evident this year. Over the past twelve months, delivered prices to Europe have climbed by over 25% with prices for the medium and large grades up from less than €5/kg during February 2006 to over €6/kg during the current period. Increases over the past year are also reported for other cephalopod products but at a lower rate. Whole cleaned frozen cuttlefish (Thai origin) indications are up between 3 and 13% in dollar terms depending on size grade while dollar prices reported for whole cleaned octopus are up 10% since the first half of 2006.

CRUSTACEANS

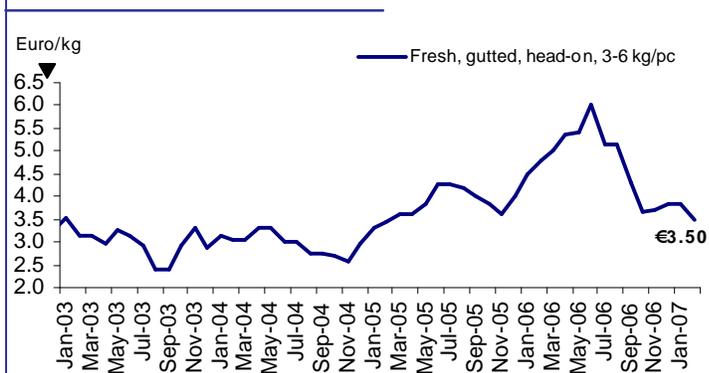

Imported frozen shrimp price movements are reported stable to decreasing in European markets compared to last month. Somewhat weaker prices for P. vannamei products are indicated in a broadly stable EU demand and supply context while prices are unchanged in the UK for frozen coldwater shrimp products. In general, shrimp consumption in Europe remains buoyant and full year figures for 2006 are likely to show new import records in key European markets, a notable exception being the UK where shrimp imports were largely in line with 2005 levels.

SALMON/TROUT

Salmon - In Europe, origin: Norway

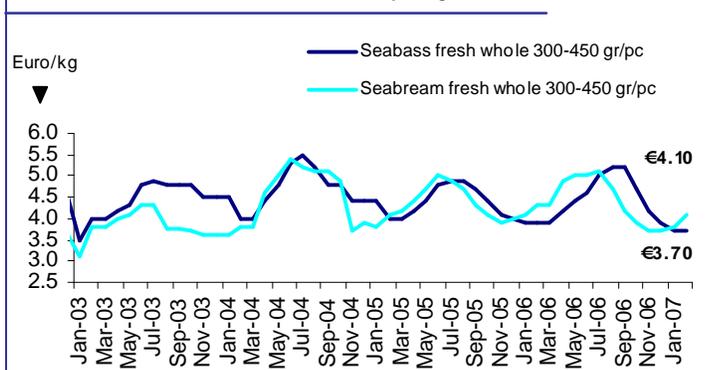

The European salmon market is rather unsettled for the moment with mixed signals on future supply. Weekly prices were falling throughout January but are now firming. Norwegian exporters are quoting higher prices for contracts covering the next three months but at the same time salmon can be bought spot at much lower levels. Chilean supply for the year is expected to remain at current levels with no expansion in supply foreseen; this should also indicate that price levels in the European market could be firming over the next months.

SEABASS/SEABREAM

Seabass and Seabream - In Italy, origin: Greece

The prices of seabream have started to increase for all sizes up to 600 gr whereas bass prices are unchanged from January.

The increases for seabream so far were in the 5-10 % range and are expected to continue firming for both species until early summer when the new generation fish comes to market.
